

Erika Fox started with piano lessons in primary school and through high school where she accompanied the school choir. She furthered her studies at the Tygerberg College and received private tuition under Rielle Viviers to be a church organist, a well-loved position that she held for about 4 years, directing the church choir as well.

Erika completed three UNISA exams with distinction in classical guitar. She and Val Cornes, a former member of the London Symphony Orchestra, held 2 highly successful concerts in Zimbabwe by invitation. Erika presently directs her own ensemble, "the musical affair", in which she plays the piano.
